> Marble Hill. What the Coal Strike Has Done.

Landon Knight, well known as a magazine contributor, has an illustrated article in Conkey's Home Journal for November on "What the Coal Strike Has Done," that brings to light some very interesting details concerning the inner workings of both the operators and miners. Mr. Knight spent considerable time in the anthraciie coal regions as special representative of Conkey's Home Journal and gives a fair and impartial report of his investigations. He says the condition of the miners and their families has been grossly misrepresented to the public and that they are not at all the down-trodden, poverty-stricken class they have been represented by many writers. He claims for them that they are among the best paid workingmen in the world; that they have good homes and educated families. On the other hand, Mr. Knight does not spare the operator. He brands as false the statement of the operator that he can not pay s higher price for labor without workiog his mine at a loss. "The fact of than fifteen per cent on the investment" "But," continues Mr. Knight.
